(b) Article 17 of the Act on combating money-laundering and the financing of terrorism provides for the establishment of a Financial Intelligence Unit, which has financial independence and decision-making powers and reports to the Ministry of Finance. The arrangements for the establishment of the Financial Intelligence Unit are to be determined by decree of the Prime Minister in accordance with the current Constitution. This decree is being finalized by the Office of the Prime Minister.

The Financial Intelligence Unit is an administrative unit but also has investigative powers. Two bodies will be involved in the management of the unit: (i) the Governing Board, which is responsible for considering general policy issues; and (ii) the Executive Secretariat, which is responsible for the day-to-day management of the unit.

The Financial Intelligence Unit will be funded initially from the State budget. In addition, there is a general plan to set up a fund to combat organized crime which will finance, inter alia, the operation of the unit.

10. The structures and mechanisms in place within the Administration of the Democratic Republic of the Congo for the identification of financial networks associated with terrorism are the Central Bank, the Financial Intelligence Unit, credit institutions, other financial intermediaries and, pursuant to Title III of Act No. 04/016 of 19 July 2004 on combating money-laundering and the financing of terrorism, the Public Prosecutor's Office.

The National Committee for Coordinating Efforts to Counter International Terrorism, which brings together experts from all these bodies, is responsible for coordination at the national level.

11. The Democratic Republic of the Congo invites the Committee to refer to the sections relating to paragraph 1 (a) and (d) of Security Council resolution 1373 (2001) in its third report to the Counter-Terrorism Committee (S/2005/260).

In general terms, Act No. 04/016 of 19 July 2004 provides the Democratic Republic of the Congo with a legislative framework with provisions for the prevention, detection and, when appropriate, suppression of acts of money-laundering and the financing of terrorism. According to instruction No. 15 of 15 December 2005 issued by the Central Bank of the Democratic Republic of the Congo, credit institutions, financial services companies, exchange offices and microfinance institutions are obliged, pursuant to the above Act No. 04/016 of 19 July 2004, to take the following steps:

- Verify the identity and address of the client from certified documents at the time the relationship is established;
- Monitor the client's operations. Such verifications take place in accordance with the "know your customer" and due diligence requirements.

Banks and other financial intermediaries must have measures in place to ensure the identification of clients who wish to open an account or conduct a remote transaction.

These measures may include arranging for authentication of the documents presented, a request for additional documents, independent verification of the client's status by a reputable third party, the requirement that a first payment be made through an account opened in the client's name in a bank subject to international standards to combat money-laundering and the financing of terrorism or the sending of a receipt to the client's address by courier.

The Central Bank of the Democratic Republic of the Congo has the power to monitor and discipline all financial sector entities (credit institutions, financial services companies and microfinance institutions).

Act No. 04/016 of 19 July 2004: with this law, the Democratic Republic of the Congo has taken steps to combat money-laundering and to criminalize the financing of terrorism.

Act No. 003/2002 of 2 February 2002 regulates the activity and control of credit institutions.

All these laws include provisions to regulate the reporting of suspicious financial transactions. The National Committee for Coordinating Efforts to Counter International Terrorism is the coordination agency responsible for providing the relevant public services (the Central Bank, the police, customs, special services and the INTERPOL National Central Bureau) with the updated list of persons or entities transmitted by the Committee established pursuant to Security Council resolution 1267 (1999).

In accordance with the above Act No. 04/016, credit institutions and other financial intermediaries are required to declare all suspicious transactions to the national Financial Intelligence Unit.

The Governor of the Central Bank of the Democratic Republic of the Congo has issued an instruction on the rules applicable to microfinance establishments in relation to combating money-laundering and the financing of terrorism.
